Executive Summary

- Thrivent Diversified Income Plus Fund outperformed its Morningstar peer group in both the fourth quarter and 1-year.
- For the 1-year, equity added to relative performance, with an underweighting in total equity and domestic equity detracting but underweighting in small-mid (SMID) caps, and aggregate equity manager performance adding to relative performance.

Performance factors

Fixed income in the Fund for the fourth quarter returned 6.83% gross of fees. The Fund's fixed income outperformed estimated Morningstar peer group fixed-income holdings. In the quarter, the Federal Reserve (Fed) paused interest rate increases to assess the lagged impact of higher rates. Treasury interest rates fell across the yield curve, which inverted further slightly. Credit spreads fell and remain tight versus long-term averages.

Positive contributors to relative performance in the fourth quarter included interest rate and Treasury yield curve positioning as the Fund was long duration versus the Morningstar Conservative Allocation peer group. Interest rates rallied strongly on expectations the Fed was done hiking rates. Other positives include an underweighting to Treasuries, and overweighted positions in emerging markets debt and high yield. Negatives included selection within high-yields bonds, and an underweighted position in investment-grade corporates and an overweighting to cash.

The 3% to 4% underweighting to equity detracted from performance as equity outperformed fixed income for the period. A modest underweighting to SMID caps detracted somewhat from performance. Managers in aggregate underperformed their respective benchmarks.

For the trailing twelve months, the Fund's fixed income returned 8.09% gross of fees. The greatest positive contributors were overweighted positions in high yield, leveraged loans, and emerging markets along with an underweighting in Treasuries. Also, selection was strong within securitized assets, including an overweighting in Collateralized Loan Obligations (CLOs). Interest rate positioning also was negative for the full year.

Over the trailing year we decreased risk by lowering leveraged loans significantly along with decreasing emerging markets debt, high-yield bonds, and preferred securities. We added to Treasuries, investment-grade corporates, and agency and non-agency mortgages mortgage-backed securities. Overall, we have reduced credit risk, although the Fund by design still takes greater credit risk relative to the peer group.

The 1% underweighting to domestic equity detracted from performance. Managers in aggregate outperformed their respective benchmarks. Outperformance came from the Large Cap Growth, International and Large Cap Value managers.

To manage overall Fund risk, we reduced equity by 0.50% in mid-October and by 1.00% in the third week of November.

Portfolio outlook

We expect interest rate volatility to remain elevated given competing pressures on rates including the Federal Reserve's intention to keep rates high for long, increased Treasury supply to fund deficits and the risk of sticky core inflation pressuring rates higher. Downward pressures on rates include expected slowing growth, decelerating inflation, and buying from yield seeking investors. We expect rates to decline into 2024. We expect the Fed to pause in the fourth quarter and hold rates steady with rate cuts later in 2024 as inflation slows along with the economy. We also expect the Treasury yield curve to steepen into 2024 as the market prices in a peak in Fed Funds and subsequent cuts. Additionally, we favor high-quality fixed income such as investment-grade corporates as defaults in lower quality corporates such as high yield are rising and are likely to increase with slowing growth and tighter credit standards. While we are cautious at current levels, we are watching for opportunities to add credit risk should credit spreads widen materially in addition to adding alternative holdings such as convertibles, preferred securities, and fixed-income closed-end funds.

We are underweighted international primarily in Europe and emerging markets. We favor domestic over international in the intermediate-to-long term for a variety of reasons including peak globalization, a higher degree of innovation domestically, greater demographic issues internationally, structural issues in Europe, and a more favorable climate for businesses (e.g., regulation) domestically. While there is a possibility international may outperform in the short-term, we retain the capacity to add to our international underweighting if that occurs.

Risks: Debt securities are subject to risks such as declining prices during periods of rising interest rates and credit risk, or the risk that an issuer may not pay its debt. The Fund's value is influenced by a number of factors, including the performance of the broader market, the effectiveness of the Adviser's allocation strategy, and risks specific to the Fund's asset classes, investment styles, and issuers. The Adviser is also subject to actual or potential conflicts of interest. The use of derivatives (such as futures) involves additional risks and transaction costs. Foreign investments involve additional risks, such as currency fluctuations and political, economic and market instability, which may be magnified for investments in emerging markets. High yield securities are subject to increased credit risk as well as liquidity risk. The Adviser's assessment of investments may prove incorrect, resulting in losses or poor performance. Leveraged loans, preferred securities, sovereign debt, and mortgage-related and other asset-backed securities are subject to additional risks. The London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR) is being phased out, which brings uncertainty to instruments tied to it. When bond inventories are low in relation to the market size, there is the potential for decreased liquidity and increased price volatility. Securities markets generally tend to move in cycles with periods when security prices rise and periods when security prices decline. The Fund invests in other funds; therefore, the Fund is dependent upon the performance of the other funds and is subject to the risks, additional fees and expenses of the other funds. The Fund may engage in active and frequent trading of portfolio securities, which may result in higher transaction costs and higher taxes. When interest rates fall, certain obligations will be paid off more quickly and proceeds may have to be invested in securities with lower yields. The use of quantitative investing techniques also involves risks. These and other risks are described in the prospectus.
